PROFESSOR SMALL PREDICTS A WINTER OF UN-PRECEDENTED DISTRESS AMONG THE POOR.

Unless the people of Chicago have a chance to work at any price, and accept that chance, we shall have a condition of misery in Chicago that will exceed by 100 per cent anything experienced last winter. The people who gave money last whiter for the support of the unfortunates will have far less to contribute this year. Those who were able has profits incident to the World's Fair are now scarcely able to meet necessary expenses. Besides, all casses of people have been exasperated beyond measure by the nonsensical action of the people who have imped into the leadership of great bodies of laboring people, and on that account will be less willing the devote a portion of their means to the support of the people whom they class with those who are responsible for this condition of affairs. Add to this distance of the people whom they class with those who are responsible for this condition of affairs. Add to this distance of the people whom they class with those who are responsible for this condition of the National currency system, and the outlook is dark indeed, for some months at least. The Populist movement cannot be calculated with any degree of suitsfaction. I believe the attifude of the Populists toward moneany and financial questions to be thoroughly uninsiligent and unreliable.

"My-practical suggestion for the poor of Chicago is to take anything they can get to do, and account themselves lucky if they can get anything. The Civic Federation has already begun to plan for the winter's work, and the task is not an encouraging one. I am convinced there have been in Hyde Park more people looking for cold victuals during the month of July than at any time last year. Whatever may be the cause, the fact is patent and must soon be met by Chicago people."

RIFIC MIDNIGHT STRUGGLE ENSUES.

Hobart, N. Y., Aug 5 (Special). The Rev. Hector Cowan, professor of athletics and instructor in theology at Kansas University, formerly centrerush for Princeton's champion football team, had a thrilling midnight encounter one night last week with a supposed burglar at the Cowan homestead, near here, where he is spending his vacation. There have been a good many burglaries in this vicinity of late. Summer guests, careless about locking their rooms at the hotels and boarding-houses, have been the principal sufferers, and every one has been on the lookout for thieves.

Mr. Cowan occupies a bedroom with his wife on the lower floor. His brother Henry, who is also a stalwart young athlete, weighing 20 pounds, sleeps the lower floor. His brother Henry, who is also a stalwart young athlete, weighing 29 pounds, sleeps on the second floor. Some time in the night each was awakened by a sound which seemed to come from the opening of a window on the veranda roof. Each started to investigate it. Henry was the first in the room whence the noise seemed to come, and on his hands and knees he was cautiously working his way up to the window when he was suddenly pounced upon by Hector, who had stolen up noise easily behind and mistook Henry for a lurglar. Henry is seven years younger than his brother, who, from earliest boyhood until within the last few years, has made an improvised football of him whenever the big Princetonian felt the need of vigorous exercise. But Henry has added pounds of flesh and muscle since those old days, and Hector Cowan found at once he had his hands full. The room was dark, and a terrible struggle for mastery began. They rolled swer and over on the floor, smasning furniume and upsetting stands. First one would be on top, only to be kicked against the window, and then both stopped in astonishment at recognizing each other.

When a light was brought and the now thoroughly aroused household looked at the wrecked room and the battered athletes, there was a hearty hugh all around, and any amount of relicule heaped upon the mistaken combatants by the immates of the household. The brothers were laid up with their brulses and stiffness the next day, but both were devoutly thankful that neither was armed, as they acknowledge the encounter would probably have had a fatal termination.

LIEUTENANT MANEY'S CASE.

Chicago, Aug. 5.-There is much gossip at Fort Sheridan over the President's decision disapproving the court-martia,'s decision in the case of Lieutenant Maney, who slew Captain Hedberg. This decision results in setting Lieutenant Maney free from all charges, and without prejudice to his rank in the Army. The court-martial, which sat at Fort Snelling, had ordered Maney publicly reprimanded, and it is believed that this punishment was con-sidered too light by the officials of the War De-BREVOORT-Thomas Baring, of London, and Lord Haddo, of Ottawa, Canada. A veteran captain of the 15th puts the Army opinion of the case thus.

The court-martial decided that Maney was technically guilty of a violation of discipline in writing a threatening letter to Captain Hedberg, as shown in the second specification of the charges. The Court did not think under the circumstances that he was really guilty of a grave offence, but technically it felt cailed upon to inflet some penalty. So the reprimand was decided upon. It is evident this decision did not seem severe enough to the War Department, and it was disapproved. To say, though, that it was disapproved and Maney was allowed to go untouched as a sort of reward to the 15th for work in the strike is pure rot. That had nothing to do with it at all. So far as personal feeling is concerned, the most of the Fort Sheridan officers seem gad that no punishment is to be visited on "Jim" Maney. Many of them were congratulating him yesterday.

Lieutenant Maney has been living quiet,y at the post ever since the Fort Snelling court-martial adjourned. He has grown heartly sick of the notoriety which the Hedberg shooting has brought upon him, and speaks bitterly of the newspaper comments on the tragedy and the subsequent court-
